From Brand: Cambridge University Press : Living and Working with the New Medical Technologies: Intersections of Inquiry (Cambridge Studies in Medical Anthropology) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Living and Working with the New Medical Technologies:

Intersections of Inquiry (Cambridge Studies in Medical Anthropology):

This stimulating collection of essays, a product of a dialogue among anthropologists, sociologists, and philosopher-historians, focuses on the newly created biomedical technologies and their practical applications. Drawing on ethnographic and historical case studies, the authors show how biomedical technologies are produced through the agencies of tools and techniques, scientists and doctors, funding bodies, patients, and the public. Despite shared concerns, the authors achieve no consensus about their research objectives, and deep epistemological divides clearly remain, making for provocative reading.

'This volume's strength lies in its multiple understandings of scientific objects and practices. ... It is still, a decade after publication, relevant to continuing concerns, reflecting the continuing lack of agreement in epistemology, but approaches that nonetheless, articulate new knowledge.' The Journal of Biosocial Science
