before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Tackling the Uninsured Puzzle: Colloborating for Community Care:

What if you could provide care to everyone without health insurance? You can't handle the task alone, but you can be an agent of change by taking the lead and spurring others to activity. Get inspiration and ideas from this book, which spotlights examples of community-based collaboratives that have brought together health care providers, consumers, competitors, political representatives and social advocates to address lack of access to health care. 2001, 221 pp. Case Studies Communities in Action to Achieve Success Buncombe County Medical Society's Project Access (North Carolina) Franklin Community Health Network's Contract for Care (Farmington, Maine) Indianapolis School-Based
